

Community College Leadership Certificate Program (On-line)

Shortage of Community College Leaders Expected by 2012 ~Chronicle of Higher Education (August, 2008)

Nearly half of all undergraduate students enrolled in America today matriculate at community colleges. These institutions are rich in diversity offering multifold programs as well as a vast array of services to meet student needs.

The Community College Leadership Certificate Program is designed for professionals aspiring to leadership positions within community colleges and those who seek to learn more about comprehensive community colleges. The program will provide knowledge and professional development in the areas of community college purpose and roles; leadership and management; workforce and community development; trends and contemporary issues; curriculum and student development.

The online program offers convenience and flexibility. Classes may also be applied to the master's or doctoral program in Higher Education Administration and Student Personnel.
